“ He used to come up to my house and leave watermelons on our front porch whenever he have them. It was awesome!! He was so kind. I'm really going to miss him.

“ I remember coming home from the bar with you driving and aunt T being drunk next to you. We got pulled over and the officer asked if you had been drinking and she had looked at the officer and said "no sir all I have is my- hiccup my diet Dr soda." We rode home laughing. I will always remember that and I will always remember you.

“ My fzvorote memory of Mr. James was when everyone was down at our house during hurricane Michael I think it was. He wanted coffee and the storm was well upon us. He didnt know how to use my Keurig coffee machine. So I walked him thru it and he tried his hand at it. Just as he hit the button to brew, we lost electricity. I was like ‘great, ya broke it...’
He thought he did for a moment. What a good laugh in a stressful time.

“ Well I don't know where to begin Dad but I sure miss the hell out of you. I dont know how im suppose to function without your stubborn ole' self, you were my whole world and rock. Everytime I get mad at you for leaving me, your grandson, my lil' Evan, takes up for you and tells me to NOT say bad things about papa. He doesn't understand that there's not a bad thing that can be said about you, I'm just a wreck losing you so quickly. I love you dad, don't worry about mom, we're taking good care of her and alot of lovely folks have donated to help her make the bills. And I'm going to get the renewed stickers for your boat like you wanted and take it out so Evan and I can catch that big fish, with mentos, that you had planned with Evan when you got home and well. You're missed and loved by more than you know. Enjoy fishing in Heaven with Stan, my brother/your son. I love you very much <3

“ When we moved to Trenton he was the very 1st person i met.As we talked across the fence(both were cutting grass in our fields) much to my dismay we knew alot of the same people from our days in the racing field. most of the time we talked it was about racing,politics or families. J.D., I will miss you neighbor and our chats we had. God Bless you and your family.
